PIONEER WASHER.
E. G. BOLTER,
AGENT FOR OREGON AND WASHINGTON TERRITORY

THIS CELEBRATED WASHING MACHINE IS now for the first time introduced to the Oregon public It is unrivalled for its simplicity, durability and the rapidity and ease of its action Washing the dirtiest clothes perfectly clean in from five to ten minutes, with but slight labor, and lasting, with proper care, for ten years The wear and tear of clothing in washing by this machine is vastly less than by any other known process of washing It does its work by a reverse motion in forcing the water through the clothes
It having a tight cover, the steam thus assists materially in cleansing the clothes, and also avoids the inhaling of steam from hot suds
This Machine captured the Special Premium at the California State Fair and all that have used it pronounce it an invaluable adjunct to aid housekeepers and families and washing men and washing women
It has been extensively introduced throughout the State of California, and receives the universal commendation of all who have used it
THE COUNTY RIGHTS now unsold, will be sold at a bargain if applied for soon

The Surratt Case

CHARGE OF JUDGE FISHER.

WASHINGTON, Aug 7, 1867.

In the Surratt case to day, after some discussion upon immaterial points, Judge Fisher charged the jury at length, concluding as follows

From the observations which I have addressed to you, you will infer,

First, That conspiracy formed in time of war to take the life of the President and Vice President of the Republic and the heads of the Executive Departments, for the purpose of aiding the enemies of the Federal Government, by throwing it into anarchy and confusion, is treason, as heinous and hurtful to the people of this country as compassing the death of the King or Queen of Great Britain is to the subjects of that realm

Second, That every person engaged in such conspiracy, as long as he continues a member of it, is responsible, not only for the act of treason, but for any murder or less crime which may flow from it

Third, That the Government may waive the charge of treason against any or all of the conspirators, and proceed against them for the small er crime of murder, included in the greater crime of treason

Fourth, That under any indictment for a murder resulting from the prosecution of such conspiracy, evidence of the entire scope of conspiracy may be considered in estimating the heinous character of the offense laid in the indictment

Fifth, That it was not necessary to aver in the indictment the fact that Abraham Lincoln, the victim of murder, was, at the time of its commission, President of the United States, or to prove it, in order to allow the jury to take that fact into account in determining the heinous character of the crime, it being a fact of which the Court will take judicial cognizance

Sixth, That he who does an act by another, does it by himself, and is responsible for it consequences, in criminal as well as in civil cases.

Seventh, That although an alibi, when clearly established, forms a complete and unanswerable defence, mere absence from the immediate scene of a crime, resulting from conspiracy unrepented of and abandoned by the party, will not avail him, if he were at some other place assigned him, performing his part in that conspiracy

Eighth, That this plea is, unless clearly made out, always regarded with suspicion, and a circumstance weighing against him who attempted it, because it implies an admission of the truth of the facts alleged against him and the correctness of the inference drawn from them

Ninth, That the flight from the scene of crime, the fabrication of false accounts, the concealment of instruments of violence, are circumstances indicating guilt

Tenth, Although a confession in the slightest degree tainted with a promise of favor, or by duress or fear, is not admitted as evidence against him who makes it, yet if made freely and voluntarily is one of the surest proofs of guilt

As to the credibility of the witnesses you are to be the exclusive judges You see them face to face You know whether they are confirmed or unsupported, or contradicted by other witnesses of credit, or other circumstances You are to judge whether their testimony has been impeached, and consider every matter that will shed any light as to what has been truthfully or falsely deposed by any witness You will diligently collate and compare, carefully weigh and consider all the testimony of any witness, unless satisfied he has been shown to be unworthy of pure evidence, by reason of his want of character for truth, his contradicting himself or flatly contradicted by others of better credit, or by dishonesty of purpose manifested by his conduct and manner in testifying before you

In conclusion, you will take the case with honest purpose to do justice to the United States and the defendant, bearing in mind that it is the office of law to secure the punishment of the guilty and protection of the innocent If John H Surratt, in the honest and intelligent conviction of your judgment and conscience, is not guilty, so pronounce by your verdict, thus giving a lesson of assurance that a court of justice is the asylum of innocence On the contrary, if guilty, pronounce him guilty, and by your verdict furnish a guarantee to the intended victims of guilt, and a testimonial to the country and world that the District of Columbia, set apart by the Constitution of the United States as a theatre for the exercise of federal power, gives judicial guaranties essential to the protection of the persons of public servants, commissioned by the people of the nation to do their work, safe and sacred from the presence of unpunished assassins with its borders

A CLERICAL HORSE.—Dr Holmes will have to look to his laurels In a late installment of "Norwood" we find a bit of humor in description of a clerical variety of horseflesh worthy of the "Autocrat" in his best mood

The horse was the parson's favorite He literally had no faults He was never known to kick, or to bite anything but food Hay constituting his principal food, a larger quantity was required than would have been if oats or corn had furnished more concentrated nourishment in smaller bulk Nature, ever kind to her creatures, gradually enlarged the barrel of the horse until his belly was puffed out far beyond any requirements of beauty A large, mild and sleepy eye revealed half the quietness of his disposition His legs might be handled by boys. You might sit down safely between his hind legs There was no liberty you could not take, except that of fast driving You might pour a bushel of potatoes suddenly upon his haunches without producing excitement—not, however, because he was lifeless, but from mere self possession, for a peck of oats (a rarity seldom ventured) at the other extremity quickly showed there was life in him

He was safe "Slow and sure," was his maxim When the good parson was once seated in the chaise, the events were as follows When the self possessed animal with his head and neck declining a little below the line of his back, felt the rein in the doctor's hand, he opened his eyes, and having been standing on his three legs, the fourth crooked up and resting on the edge of the hoof, he brought them all squarely under him, as if saying, 'I am all here sir!' Next the doctor pulled both reins, and they were pulled Then he slapped them upon his back, with a gentle slap, and pulled one of them with some decision The time had come The horse started, walked into the road and then, after several admonitions, fell into an easy jog, which satisfied his parson's ambition But no persuasion could carry that trot up the slightest rise in the ground It was this habit of stopping early in ascending and starting again late in descending hills that secured to this matchless horse long life and immunity from strains Dr Buell innocently told Hiram Beers that he never used a bottle of liniment in his life

THE LONDON PAPERS—HOW THEIR EDITORIALS ARE WRITTEN.—An article in an English periodical purporting to be written by an editor, (a humbugging Bohemian we judge) says that the editorial "we" of the London press is a literal fact, because the leading articles, with hardly an exception, 'are the work, not of a single person, but of an association of gentlemen combined for the purpose, almost all of whom have had some hand in the dish which is finally set before the public' These are the leader writers Some of them may be editors, but usually they are not They are outsiders and for the most part either men strong upon any particular subject, or literary Bohemians with skill of the pen upon any topic within a range more or less wide

The manner in which this writing force is brought to bear upon the editorial columns is too detailed for us to copy in full, but we give its principal features At first there is a consultation between the leader writers and the editor in chief about noon of each day, at which the topics for the next morning's editorials are selected and assigned This is represented as a work of no little difficulty, and as sometimes occasioning fierce debate By six o'clock in the evening the articles must be handed in Each goes immediately into type and then has two proof readings, the first for errors of the press, and the second for "the sense." By eight o'clock the final proof of the leader, "printed on a great sheet of paper, which leaves a margin seven inches wide on either side of the type," is ready for the hands of the editor. The latter, with his revising editor, then enters upon a thorough overhauling of the essay, comparing each with the others and with previous articles, and altering and revising till he is finally satisfied "Very frequently," says this account, "this revision amounts almost to the rewriting of the article, and sometimes the or... recognize a single sentence ... tion in it as it appears ... will be seen, then, that ... of the editorial is done by ... mine the line of argum... that the expression, the wor... be revised, together with th... more.

Representation of Minorities.

It is only a few years since a considerable party, while insisting with great pertinacity on maintaining the "Constitution as it is," demanded with the very same breath the amendment of the Constitution by the Crittenden Compromise. This solecism is paralleled by the present notion of the same party in denouncing as "Constitution tinkers" those of their opponents who propose any amendment of that instrument, while at the same time they themselves actually propose to amend the Constitution for partisan purposes. The latest effort to amend that instrument on the part of those who are so zealous for "the Constitution as it is," is to introduce certain changes whereby minorities may be represented in Congress and the State Legislatures. Democrats being a minority, are not represented in proportion to their strength in the popular vote, and they are beginning to regard it as a great hardship. Hence a scheme is broached whereby every minority is to be represented exactly according to its strength. Of course it will be instantly remarked that this beautiful idea never occurred to the Democratic mind while that party had majorities in nearly all the States, and that this tender care of the rights of minorities is evidently born of that adversity which has reduced the Democracy to their present unfortunate condition. So long as that party could command majorities it never had the least glimpse of an idea that minorities had any rights; and all powerful as it was it would have rejected with insolence and contempt any proposition to allow them representation in proportion to their numbers.

Some of the papers of this State in the interest of the Democracy have complained of the inequality of representation, and their Eastern journals have of late been very generally discussing it. It is mentioned as a great hardship that the Republican party with 2,500,000 voters in the States now represented should have 150 representatives in Congress, while the Democratic party with 2,000,000 voters, has only 50 representatives in that body. Smarting under the injustice of this idea which the misfortunes of his party have taught him, Mr. Buckalew, a Democratic Senator from Pennsylvania, introduced in the Senate at the late special session a proposition to amend the Constitution to secure the better representation of minorities. Such a proposition would, of course, come only from a minority party. It would practically upset our system of government by majorities, and would ensure solely to the advantage of the minority. It would still further complicate our politics, and would put the minority in a position where it might easily defeat the plainly expressed will of the larger portion of the people. The inequality of representation is not greater now than it was in Democratic times. We submitted then without murmuring to the rule of the majority, and they must do the same thing now. One wing of their party tried to escape from majority rule by rebellion and the other wing is now trying another expedient to accomplish the same end. The rule of majorities is extremely irksome and galling to Democrats, except when the majorities are on the side of their party.

[illegible] dispatches announce that the acting President is about to publish a general amnesty to include all who participated in the late rebellion. [illegible] out the Johnson-Confederate idea to its [illegible] end, everybody ought to be fully pardoned [illegible] officers who rendered themselves particularly odious to President Davis and his Government during the war. This class will [illegible] not be amnestied; but at the rate the [illegible] is traveling, it would not be strange if they were soon turned over to the Southern authorities for punishment. Several of them were [illegible] by President Davis on several occasions, [illegible] to conciliate our Southern brethren and to [illegible] Johnson's policy a success, they should at [illegible] be handed over to be dealt with as they do [illegible]. Sherman, too, should be indicted for [illegible] Atlanta, and Grant should be prosecuted [illegible] around Vicksburg and Richmond. [illegible] the policy be Amnesty for all except this [illegible] of Union officers!

Mr. Covode of Pennsylvania in a late speech in [illegible] remarked that the cheapest solution of the Indian troubles is in the prompt construction of the Pacific Railroad. Said he: "As the railroad now presses on toward the Rocky mountains it drives the frontier ahead and dispenses with the use of forts and troops, while it affords the emigrants a base along which they can settle and form their own defenses for the future, as the Indian makes war upon isolated settlers and gives the lines horses a wide margin. The expense of [illegible] one regiment on the plains for a year will build a hundred miles of railroad. Let the Government aid the Pacific Railroads by endorsing their bonds liberally, for they will settle this question more rapidly and more certainly than any I have yet been able to discover."

The moral condition of London is graphically [illegible] by one of its clergymen. He says:

"My friends, do you wish to know the dreadful condition in which more than six hundred and fifty thousand of your countrywomen are vegetating? Listen and tremble. In the midst of our great city, twelve thousand children are cradled in crime, suckled by vice, and are, as it were, receiving elements destined to perpetuate the same great system of iniquity. In the midst of our city there are upwards of forty thousand [illegible] speculating in the deprivation of morals; [illegible] thousand persons are annually sentenced to hard labor and we have in London more than twenty thousand swindlers, thirty thousand thieves and forty thousand beggars. And this terrible army of vice which never ceases to commit its fearful ravages, spends annually upwards of three millions of pounds sterling for spirituous liquors. Twenty-three thousand soldiers of this army are every year picked up dead drunk at the doors of the grog shops; one hundred and fifty thousand are gin drinkers, and two hundred and fifty thousand more live in debauchery."

It may well be doubted if any "heathen" city, in proportion to population, presents a more revolting spectacle.

A letter from Salem dated August 30th, written by our special correspondent "P. W. G.", got into the paper yesterday without having been seen by the proof reader. Several very ludicrous errors appear in it, for which we wish to assure everybody that the compositor, and not "P. W. G.", is responsible. Blunders like this will sometimes occur in a printing office notwithstanding the use of vigilant efforts to avoid them. We publish the letter in its correct form to-day.

Gov. Woods.—The Stars and Stripes says of Gov. Woods:

Excepting, perhaps, Col. E D. Baker and Starr King, no man has ever so completely captivated the people of our county as the distinguished Governor of Oregon, by the speeches he made at Dutch Flat and Forest Hill during the past week. Tall, slender and apparently of feeble physical organization, Gov. Woods has a voice like a clarion, and could easily make himself heard in the open air by ten thousand persons. His style is purely logical and boundlessly forcible. His logic is of the sledge-hammer quality, and he drives his every argument clear home before he leaves it. Baker thrilled the sensibilities more, and Starr King may have aroused more tender emotions, but Gov. Woods has never had his equal on the California stump for clear statement, irrefragible argument and irresistible appeal to the judgment. Oregon and the Pacific coast may well be proud of this gray-eyed, clarion tongued, clear-headed, sound-hearted logician and patriot.

The extent of pocket-picking at the Paris Exposition may be judged from the fact announced by the French papers, that on one Sunday no less than eighty four professionals were caught in the act.

[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO SEPTEMBER 3.

Navy News

WASHINGTON, Sept 3.—Admiral Farragut sends an account of his enthusiastic reception in Russia.

Rear Admiral Gordon forwards an account of the part taken by our fleet in the naval ceremonies on the occasion of the arrival of Prince Alfred at Rio.

The Susquehanna left Aspinwall on the 19th, and will visit Carthagena, Curaco Porta Cabello, etc. It is very sickly along the coast.

The Amnesty

CHICAGO Sept 3.—The Times special of to night says the Amnesty Proclamation was again considered in the Cabinet to-day. The President is being urged to make the Amnesty universal, but has not decided to do so, though he will probably yield. Pardon has been granted to the following classes: All civil or diplomatic agents of the rebel government, all absentees from the country for the purpose of aiding the rebellion, all who left Congressional or Judicial stations to participate in the rebellion, all Governors of rebel States, all who took the oath of Amnesty prescribed in the Proclamation of December, 1865, all military and naval officers below the rank of Lieutenant-Generals and Captains in the navy. There is much variance of opinion among the Cabinet and these classes may be changed. Perhaps universal Amnesty will be granted.

Miscellaneous.

In view of the terrible ravages by yellow fever, Hancock has asked to be permitted to avail himself of the privilege of the recent order from the War Department, allowing officers ordered on duty in that locality, to remain North till October 13th.

Gen. Sheridan has been ordered to report at Leavenworth. The present command of the Fifth District devolves upon General Griffin till the arrival of Hancock.

The Investigating Commission of the Treasury Bureau, have discovered a defalcation in one of the Departments of several thousand dollars by a Clerk. The investigation is not concluded and the guilty party has not been arrested.

Grant did not attend the Cabinet meeting to-day, deeming it improper to be present when military matters are not under consideration.

LOUISVILLE, Sept 3.—Owing to the feeble condition of the health of John T. Helm, his inauguration as Governor took place at his residence in Elizabethtown. Gov. Bramlette is installed yet and has reported the State finances in a very gratifying condition. The entire debt is only about $5,000,000, and the State has ample means to discharge all her liabilities. After congratulating the people on the return of peace, he says the Radical action was born of sectional hate and threatened to wreck our republican form of Government, lay waste the arts of peace and the security of our bounteous country, and the people are threatened with a frightful despotism. We should adopt considerate counsels and prudent, united action against the movements of the Radicals.

NEW YORK, Sept 3.—Rock has been struck at a depth of 92 feet in boring on the Brooklyn side of the river for a solid foundation for the East River bridge.

Ledrick, the supposed Mexican robber, was arrested to-day.

Seward has publicly contradicted the Tribune's story that he is trying to settle the Alabama claims by negotiating for British Columbia.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—The Times' special says Statements of the National debt will show a reduction of nearly five millions in currency balance. Owing to recent large disbursements, payment of interest and by the conversion of 7 30s the coin balance has increased. Since two years ago the National debt has decreased two hundred and fifty millions in round numbers.

MR. MICAWBER TYLER TURNED UP.—The Washington correspondent of the Worcester Spy gives us the following information regarding a new crusader against radicalism:

We have an amusing specimen of the "chivalry" maundering about the necessity of organizing the conservative elements of the country. This is John Tyler, Jr., the son of the ex-President of that name. Tyler has some ability and fine culture, but is ruined by being the son of his father and a Southerner. He left a decent law practice in Philadelphia to serve the rebel cause, and is now very much of an adventurer. He is here now, big with a great scheme, based on Seward's Atlantic slope sectionalism, on the Catholic influences, and on a general belief in the necessity of staying the radical flood. Tyler is very dignified and emphatic, and causes considerable fun among politicians by earnest declarations that, unless the radicals are prevented from triumphing in 1868, the conservatives will find themselves a head short.

"The guillotine will be installed, sir," is his cry; "Murat and Robespierre will rule the hour; Collot Herbois with Danton, will be king—their prototypes will be found on the floor of Congress. Seward, Johnson and the rest of us, sir, will be a head shorter, unless we stay this mad radicalism. Nothing but a union of the conservative elements will do, sir, under Seward's lead."

This is the style of the new avatar of the unbound conservative Prometheus, whose labors are to give new vigor to reaction. But after all it is "bread and butter" he is after, being anxious to be employed to travel and organize the movement.

A NEW SUSPENSION BRIDGE AT NIAGARA FALLS.—The Buffalo Courier says: "Workmen are busily engaged in preparing for an abutment on the American side of Niagara river for the new suspension bridge which is intended to connect the Canada and American shores at Nligra Falls. The bridge is intended for the accommodation of foot passengers only, and the public at large will be indebted to the enterprise of such men as Wm. G. Fargo of this city, Hollis White of Niagara Falls, and John T. Bush of Clifton, Canada, for a structure that will give one of the grandest and most imposing views of the falls. The bridge will be situated but a short distance from the International Hotel on the American side. It will require a span 1,260 feet. The width will be ten feet, and the height above the water 100 feet. The structure will be of the usual wire cables, resting upon wooden towers. It will be abundantly strong and safe for the purpose for which it is intended. We understand the timbers are all framed, and will be put in place in the shortest possible time.

The moral regeneration of Africa has long occupied the attention of the Christian world, and the African Repository, the organ of the American Colonization Society, gives a pleasing picture of what has been accomplished. It appears that on the western coast of Africa, within the last fifty years, some two hundred Christian churches have been organized, and upwards of fifty thousand converts have been gathered into them. Two hundred schools, several seminaries, and a college at Monrovia, are in operation, and not less than twenty thousand native youths are receiving a Christian training in those institutions. Thirty different dialects have been studied out and reduced to writing, into most of which large portions of the Bible, as well as other religious books, have been translated, printed and circulated among the people. The report made of the progress of Christianity in Africa, is a very encouraging one.

A man in New Hampshire attempted to enforce his argument on religion with the hoe handle, and nearly beat out the brains of his antagonist.

At the White House.

[Special Correspondence of the Cincinnati Gazette]

WASHINGTON, July 17, 1867.

Most persons who come to Washington for the first time visit the White House. They see very little of it, however. Entering from the main front the visitor finds himself in a moderately sized room, opening out opposite to him into the main hall, which runs from the east room to the private portion of the building. On his right is an apartment connected with one beyond it, used as a ladies' dressing room at receptions, on the left, a door which leads out to a hall from which stairs ascend to the President's business offices, and from which one can also enter the east room.

DOWN STAIRS IN THE WHITE HOUSE

Now let the reader be certain that what follows is truth, truth unadorned, if strange and difficult of belief.

Instead of entering the East Room, as you approach it by the usual way, turn to the right and go down a tolerably well lighted stairway to the level of the basement or cellar of the building. A wide paved hall runs the entire length of the house. On one side are kitchens, store rooms, and other apartments of similar character. On the opposite are other store rooms, and besides vaults for coal and for other purposes. Let us enter one of these near the east end of the building. It is perhaps thirty or forty feet square. In it are the furnaces. The floor is stone. The furnaces are bricked over. There are piles of wood and coal in various parts. It is not tidy, and there is on all sides the litter that belongs to such a place. You shut the door and it is gloomy and quiet, and through the iron bars across the windows you can see the cobwebs and the dust on the panes. The door which leads out into the area on the south, is thick and heavy, and barred securely. As you face it, there is another door at the right, a heavy one, also. If curiosity or any previous information of what is hidden there, prompts you, open it. It will grate a little on its unused hinges. There is just room to swing it open, as it turns inward, and the small apartment is nearly filled with a variety of trash. You enter part way, and then are obliged to shut the door in order to move around. It is a small place, almost like a cell. It may be ten feet long and eight wide. There is one grated window, dim with dust, looking out into an area under a porch. There is an old work bench, half covered with worn out coal scuttles, and on the floor are some portion of broken grates and old iron pipes, and a heap of coal and kindling. An old wine box, half full of musty feathers, evidently pulled out of a rugged cushion which lies on the window sill beside it. On the coal and kindling is a lot of shavings, half mixed with feathers. On that heap of rubbish, in this subterranean cell of the White House, lies a stone, with this inscription:

ABRAHAMO LINCOLNIO
REGION, FOEDERAT, AMERIC, PRESIDI II
HVNC EX SERVI TVLLI AGGERE LAPIDEM
QVQ VTRISQUE
LIBERATTIS ADSERTORIS FORTISS
MEMORIA CONIVNGATVE
CIVES ROMANI.
MDCCCLXV.

The stone upon which this inscription is cut is a species of red sand stone very similar in texture to that so commonly in use for building purposes in our Eastern cities. Its surface has grown dark by age. A considerable piece has been battered off, and there the grain looks fresh. The block is rectangular, the upper surface being two feet and three inches long, by eighteen inches wide, and the thickness about nine inches.

The translation of the inscription, which will vary slightly with the word for which the letter D in the last line but one is an abreviation, has been thus rendered:

"The citizens of Rome dedicate this stone, taken from the tomb of Servius Tullius, to Abraham Lincoln, President for a second term of the United States of America, by which the memory of either brave defender of liberty may be joined to that of the other. A. D. 1865."

A STRANGE AND DISGRACEFUL HISTORY.

The story about this block, as told by those about the White House, is as follows:

It arrived in the autumn of 1865, or beginning of 1866. It was allowed to lie on the porch of the White House for a number of weeks. One side of the box which held it was at length broken off. The exposed side was then turned up against the building. Some who knew its character, criticising the treatment it was receiving, it was taken inside, and for sometime formed a sort of footstool under a window where orderlies and attendants sat. Finally after several moves, by none of which was its position bettered, it found its way into the cellar when the White House was being renovated last summer, and from the cellar it was allowed to rest at length in the cell where it lies to-day. Whether this account of the occupants themselves concerning its treatment be correct, certain it is, that the block as described, with the inscription as given, is in this dark coal hole in the cellar of the White House, and in any case it is a disgrace to the present occupant that it lies there. It is more than disgraceful, it is infamous.

In this connection, though the story or the legend of Servius Tullius is familiar to every reader, it will be interesting to note the parallel between the old Roman King and President Lincoln. The King was of humble origin. He was a soldier in his early manhood. He was kind to the poor, heartily espoused the cause of the masses, strove constantly to elevate them, and especially to confer upon them the right to vote. Upon announcing his determination to introduce a freer form of government, he was assassinated by his son-in-law, who, uniting with the disaffected Senators, was able to bid defiance to the resentment of his subjects. The memory of Servius lived long among the common people, their veneration for him constantly increased, and the usurper with his followers lived in daily fear lest the people should rise in power and restore the laws of the martyr. From all this the full beauty of the inscription, and the character of the sentiment which prompted the gift, will appear, and stern voices will speak to all from out that past of 2,400 years in condemnation of Andrew Johnson's treatment of Mr. Lincoln's memory.

The following is the correct text of the correspondence which recently passed between the President and Secretary of War:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON,
August 5th, 1867.

To Hon. Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War—SIR: Public considerations of a high character constrain me to say that your resignation as Secretary of War will be accepted.

Very respectfully,
(Signed,) ANDREW JOHNSON.

To which the Secretary replied as follows

WAR DEPARTMENT, August 5th, 1867,

To the President—SIR: Your note of this date has been received, stating that public considerations of a high character constrian you to say that my resignation as Secretary of War will be accepted. In reply, I have the honor to say that public considerations of a high character, which alone have induced me to continue at the head of this Department, constrain me not to resign the office of Secretary of War before the next meeting of Congress.

Very respectfully, yours,
(Signed,) EDWIN M STANTON.

Speaking of the partiality of the bronchitis for the clerical profession, the Providence Journal says. "It rarely attacks a clergyman whose salary is less than $2,000, or whose congregation is not wealthy."

An article in a London magazine dilates on the palatable quality of steaks from lions and tigers. It is not certain about lions, but it is said that those who "fight the tiger" rarely get their steaks.

Needs a work on punctuation—that soldier who sent a letter home to his girl, closing with the following. "May heaven cherish and keep you from yours truly John Smith."

The most fashionable barber in London dubs himself a professor, and styles his journeymen students.

When an extravagant friend wishes to borrow your money, consider which of the two you had rather lose.

How do we know that Pharaoh was a carpenter? Why, he made Joseph a ruler.

THE FAVORABLE TIME HAS ARRIVED.—Those new goods have arrived at KOHN & FISHEL'S and are now open to inspection. We can assure the ladies that they can now find on KOHN & FISHEL'S counters, the handsomest, cheapest and most desirable dress goods—from calico to the richest and most costly fabrics—that have been brought to Portland since the war began. NOW IS THE TIME for housewives to buy new supplies of cotton goods, prices are reduced so much as to astonish everybody. In the latest styles of business suits and FASHIONABLE CLOTHING, Kohn & Fishel are now able to eclipse any house in this city, and the goods are of the very best quality and make. There never was such a chance in Portland for BARGAINS IN FAVOR OF THE BUYER.

MARRIED:

At Trinity Church, Portland, at 8 o clock in the evening of the 4th instant, by the Rev. Wm. Stoy, Hon. Geo. H. Williams to Mrs. Kate A. George.

The church was filled to overflowing to witness the distinguished nuptials. The bride was dressed richly and beautifully. The bridal party retired to the residence of Recorder Hoffman, who gave them and their numerous friends a handsome and cordial reception. We add our blessing and good wishes.

"DULL TIMES."—Under this head the Walla Walla Statesman has the following thrust at Portland:

"A friend who has just returned from a general tour in the lower country, including Portland, Vancouver, Dalles, Umatilla, &c, tells us that he found a universal complaint of dull times. In Portland one fourth of the buildings are unoccupied, and the principal business street wears a deserted appearance. Portland grew rich off the mining trade, and having lost that is rapidly dwindling down to the condition of a quiet country town. Should the ocean steamers change their landing to Astoria, as is talked of, our friend thinks the "emporium" will flatten out entirely."

"Our friend" who gave the Statesman its information, is slightly mistaken about the "dwindling down" condition of this city. It is true enough that the times have been and are dull as compared with some former years; but the city is not "dwindling" much, nor are "one-fourth the buildings unoccupied" nor, again, do our "principal streets wear a deserted appearance." On the contrary, even though times are said to be dull, the city is spreading outward from the river, and the vacant lots, in the older parts of the city, are many of them being covered with new buildings of a creditable style. The person who does not take the trouble to walk about the city, has very little conception of the number and cost of permanent buildings and other improvements which are now in progress. There are fewer houses unoccupied, by a very large per cent, than at the opening of the season, and the difficulty of getting a desirable house for either business or residence, is daily becoming greater. The complaints of dull times arise more from a chronic habit of grumbling, than from any actual inactivity. The fact is, there is to-day as much business done in Portland as is natural for a town of its population. For a few years there was an unnatural and feverish state of things which called hither a crowd of speculators, or rather, a class of dealers who wanted to make fortunes in a few months; and because they cannot now realize such hopes, they grumble and curse the city as being dead. As to "our friend's" prophecy, that should the ocean steamers change their landing to Astoria, the emporium would flatten out entirely, we only need say that the ocean steamers have not changed their landing to Astoria; they still land regularly, each trip, at the Portland wharves. Should Mt. Hood fall through its own bottom, there would probably be an immense hole in the ground, but until that event happens, Mt. Hood will be Mt. Hood.

HARDWARE ESTABLISHMENT.—E J Northrup & Co, whose advertisement appears this morning, have an immense stock on hand. The firm occupies three floors in their main building and two stories in their warehouse. In the cellar are stored iron axles, thimble skeins, rope, horse-shoes, spikes, etc. In the first story are shelves from the floor to near the ceiling, filled with all sorts of shelf hardware, while the floor with the exception of the aisles, is piled high with nails, cases of goods, etc. The upper story is jammed full of cases of goods, hubs, spokes and wagon materials of various sorts. In the warehouse are large racks filled with bars of iron and steel of all shapes and sizes, and bundles and bars standing all around against the walls. In addition to all this storage room, they have to hire storage for Cumberland coal and cases of shovels. Mr. Northrup has been in the same store since 1852 and ought by this time to understand pretty thoroughly the wants of the people. The firm imports direct from England, New York and San Francisco and can, therefore, sell as low as like goods can be possibly afforded in this market.

MR. R. K. WARREN.—Early this week we stated that Mr. J. P. Garlick had taken the place of Mr. R. K. Warren as principal in the Harrison Street School; but we did not then know where Mr. Warren intends to go. We have since learned that he is engaged as Professor of English Literature in the new College at Albany, which, it is expected, will open its first term about the 1st of October. Mr. Warren, while here, proved himself a very competent teacher and we think the Albany school is fortunate in having securing his services. Though still a young man, he has acquired a favorable reputation for learning and the possession of those peculiar qualities which fit a person for his profession. He has been engaged about eight years as an instructor.

NEW GOODS.—Messrs Kohn & Fishel are the first in the market with a full stock of fall goods, just selected in San Francisco by Mr. Fishel, whose excellent judgment and taste in such matters is becoming proverbial. They are opening out dress goods in profusion, of patterns which, for beauty, have not often been surpassed in this city. They are offering muslins and sheetings at the prices which ruled in 1861, the reduction in prices of these styles of goods is, indeed very material. Of clothing and furnishing goods, they have an almost endless stock and at prices which place within the reach of even poor men, the possibility of wearing handsome and fashionable suits. Upon looking over this new, large and varied stock of goods, and considering the essential reduction in prices, we are impressed with the conviction that easier times for the consumers are about to begin.

S. ... BUSINESS.—As an evidence that improvements in this city are not altogether suspended, it may be noted that in addition to the lumber brought here from Oak Point, St. Helens and other mills on the Willamette and Columbia rivers, the mill of Messrs. Carter, Hayden & Co. is kept constantly running, and though making from 16,000 to 20,000 feet of lumber per day, is unable to supply the demand. The mill has orders in advance amounting to between 600,000 and 800,000 feet. So much has the demand increased since the building season opened, that the company has concluded to soon fit up their new mill and set it running to its full capacity.

HEARD FROM.—The people of Aurora, the German Colony in Marion county, have lately heard from a train of their friends who are crossing the plains to settle with them near Aurora. The train, at the time of hearing from it, had reached Ft. Boise in safety and was making its way westward. It numbers about fifty persons. We know of no class of people who will prove a more valuable addition to our population, than such Germans as constitute the Aurora colony, and we heartily welcome the advent of their friends in Oregon.

GRAND LODGE I. O. G. T.—The annual election of officers for the Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., took place yesterday, resulting in the choice of C. Beal, G. W. C. T.; T. B. Handley, G W. Counsellor; Miss Libbie Shannon, G W. V. T.; Thos. H Crawford, G W. Secretary; Dr. M. B. Lingo, G W. Treasurer, S. A. Moreland and S C Adams Representatives to the R W. Grand Lodge of North America, with Jos S. Kidder and C Beal, alternates. The installation of Grand officers will take place at 9 o'clock this morning.

CHURCH MEETING.—There will be a meeting in the basement of the Presbyterian Church, corner Third and Washington streets, this evening at 8½ o clock, of the church and congregation to take into consideration the subject of calling the Rev. A. L. Lindsay of S nth Salem, New York, to become the pastor of the Presbyterian Church of this city. All pew-holders and members of the congregation are urgently requested to attend. By order of the session. WM. WADHAMS, Clerk.

VISIT TO INSANE ASYLUM.—Several ladies and gentlemen from Salem and vicinity, who are here in attendance upon the Grand Lodge of Good Templars, paid the Insane Asylum a visit yesterday afternoon, and returned expressing themselves as being highly pleased with the kind and gentlemanly treatment received at the hands of the proprietors and officers. The neat and cleanly condition, the arrangement and general appearance of the institution are spoken of in the highest terms.

COUNTY COURT.—Proceedings of Wednesday, September 4th: In the matter of the estate of C N Hamilton; order entered, authorizing the sale of U S. Revenue stamps of the value of $693 05, and U S. bonds of the value of $2,800, and one letter press, property of which deceased died seized. An order was also entered granting six months further time in which to make final settlement of said estate.

FIRE ALARM.—The blacksmith shop of Mr. Thompson, on Front street, took fire in the roof at about four o'clock yesterday afternoon. An alarm was immediately rung from the Hook and Ladder Co's bell, and all the companies were promptly out. Before, however, they arrived at the place, the fire was extinguished without having done any damage worthy of note.

RECORDER'S COURT.—In the Recorder's Court, yesterday, Frank Balton and M Nickum were charged with larceny, in stealing a small boat. On the motion of the prosecuting attorney, Nickum was discharged for the purpose of making him a witness; and the case was continued till this morning.

GOOD NEWS.—A gentleman of this city informed us yesterday that news had been received from the Ruckles quartz mill, to the effect that a clean up has just been made, resulting in over $7,000 from one hundred and ten tons of rock. The Ruckles lodge is not played out yet.

U. S CIRCUIT COURT.—The most of the attorneys being absent, in attendance upon the Supreme Court at Salem, the cases before the U. S Circuit Court were none of them ready yesterday, and the Court adjourned till to day.

NEW FOUNDRY.—The scow load of heavy lumber and timbers now being unloaded at the O S. N Co's wharf, is for Smith Bros., who, we learn, are about to erect a new foundry and machine shop.

WILLAMETTE FREIGHTS.—Arrived per Senator yesterday; 80 tons pig iron, to Oregon Iron Works; 32 sks bacon, 1 box eggs, 5 bales blankets, 1,000 qr sks flour, 511 sks middlings, and 41 boxes fruit.

WITHOUT A LICENSE.—Two or three parties were charged in the police court yesterday with violating a city ordinance by selling liquor without licenses.

THE BARK ALMATIA.—The steamer Julia will take the bark Almatia in tow, this morning to Springville where she will take on a part cargo of wheat.

COMMON COUNCIL.—There was no meeting of the Common Council last evening, on account of there being no quorum present to transact business. Some of the members were absent from the city, and others together with his Honor, the Mayor, were otherwise engaged. Some three or four members appeared before the hour, and retired.

A TUB AND PAIL FACTORY.—The machinery for a tub and pail factory in this city is now on the way here via Cape Horn. The proprietors, Messrs Carter, Hayden & Co., intend to have the factory in operation during the coming fall or winter. This will be the first factory of the kind north of San Francisco.

SUICIDE OF A BOY.—AN ORPHAN BOY, LONELY AND DEJECTED, WITH "NO ONE TO CARE FOR HIM," TAKES STRYCHNINE.—One of the saddest cases of self destruction that has come to our knowledge for some time occurred on Sunday afternoon, on the opposite side of the river. The victim was a boy, fifteen years of age, a druggist's apprentice, with as fair prospects in life as the generality of boys. But he was an orphan and felt the want of a mother. He saw other boys loved and cared for by fond parents, while he was all alone in the world. Being of a sensitive retiring disposition, his friendless condition preyed upon his mind, and he deliberately prepared to destroy his life.

The name of the boy is Henry Tyzack. When about five years of age, his father, who resided in Morgan street, was killed by an officer whom he resisted in an effort to arrest him. His mother soon after went up on the Osage to reside with her sister, taking Henry with her. Becoming low spirited Mrs Tyzack drowned herself in the Osage river. Henry came to St Louis, and being without home and friends, was taken up by the police as an abandoned boy. Rev Mr Libby, of the Odd Fellows, seeing the fact of the boy's arrest mentioned in the papers, and knowing that the order had been contributing means for his support—his father having been an Odd Fellow—procured his release from the calaboose, and had him sent to school. Two or three years ago he was apprenticed to the drug business with Mr. Thos Tanton, corner of Sixth and Olive streets, where he remained up to the time of his death.

Between five and six o'clock last Sunday afternoon, Mr. Rehmer, a fisherman, residing on the bank of the river, about half a mile below the Terre Haute depot, discovered the boy lying on the sand near the water, writhing in convulsions. The boy had taken a bath in the river, and then dressed himself and swallowed strychnine. Before taking the fatal dose he had written his name on the wet sand of the shore near where he was found. The fisherman took him to his house and sent for a physician, under whose treatment the sufferer partially recovered, but died about ten o'clock the same night.

Before his death he stated that he did not like his situation at Mr. Tanton's; that he was not well treated by his fellow apprentice, and he informed his employer that he intended to leave him and engage in some other business. Mr. Tanton reminded him that he was an apprentice until he reached the age of twenty-one, and threatened to have him arrested if he left. Finding there was no escape from his unpleasant situation, Henry resolved to commit suicide. For this purpose he took from a jar as much strychnine as he could hold in one hand, and crossed the river on Sunday between one and two o'clock. A portion of the poison was found in his pocket at the fisherman's house.—St. Louis Democrat.

The undersigned, who has always enjoyed public confidence for the excellent quality of his Coffee, neglects nothing to justify the good name acquired by his productions, the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here, and in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial, but only adds to the favorable opinion of the consumers, the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless, buyers should be forewarned, and placed on their guard against this practice.

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS!
A Pure and Powerful Tonic,
Corrective and Alterative, of wonderful efficacy in Diseases of the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS.
PROTECTIVE PROPERTIES.

Prevents Fever and Ague and Bilious Remittent Fevers; Fortifies the System against Miasma and the evil effects of unwholesome water; Invigorates the organs of digestion and the bowels;
Steadies the Nerves and tends to Prolong Life.

REMEDIAL PROPERTIES.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Sick and Nervous Headache, General Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Sea Sickness, Cramps and Spasms, and all complaints of either sex arising from Bodily Weakness, whether inherent in the system or PRODUCED BY SPECIAL CAUSES

NOTHING THAT IS NOT WHOLESOME, GENIAL, and restorative in its nature, enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind; no deadly botanical element, no fiery excitant, but is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants, with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated, and the appetite restored by this Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of Dyspepsia, and in less confirmed forms of Indigestion. Acting as a gentle and painless aperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits, and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is conclusive, and from both sexes.

As a Genuine Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay, and Debility and Decrepitude arising from old age, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re establish them.

Last, but not least, it is the only safe stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acrid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

INTRODUCTION.

Depend upon it, life is a grim joke—a fantastic admixture of the sublime and ridiculous Look back upon your own career, my friend, and see what a strange tangled weft it is. What smudges and blotches and patches there are in it! Every now and then, it is true, you see a gorgeous bit of pattern, full of graceful lines and curves, but do they not run into ridiculous twists and twirls and fantastic angles that burlesque the beautiful and travestie the sublime?

I offer you these three rough etchings of my own life by way of illustration. Limned from nature, you may take them as untouched studies They tell their own story, and leave something to the imagination besides.

I.—DAYBREAK.

A long, straggling crooked street, with the shadow of the Elizabethan age upon it, a street with old gabled houses in it, and dark alleys, a street to wander about and ponder about. Nearly every shop was a museum of curiosities. The brokers of the city—the fine old city of Severn cross—had settled down in Tick street like a swarm of birds.

The brokers were a proud race, and a curious, but strange to say, they were under petticoat government, and strange to say, under spinsterial government. Miss Whilelmena Jenks was the chief of the race, and next to her came Miss Chalks. Both ladies were artists in their way, and supplemented brokering with artistic employment. Miss Jenks made wax figures and "tablows," as she called them, and Miss Chalks stuffed birds.

Miss Jenks had a masculine, domineering way with her, and was an energetic woman, continually fighting and asserting herself. She was perpetually announcing her birth and parentage, and demonstrating her superiority both in learning and wealth.

"My father, ath I have thaid before, wath a merchant, and a merchant in thith very city, and a boarding school education was mine from a child with use of the globes, and wool work, and when I came to years of discretion, I copied his contracts, and kept his ledger, and it is not for those who have been brought up otherwise to compete with one that has.

Your Chalkses may think it elevating to stuff birds and put glass eyes in their poor weak little heads but it's for them as knows what true art is to snap their fingers at such rubbish. What do you say, Arthur?"

That was your humble servant I was Arthur, L. Arthur Westwood. When this little outbreak of temper on the part of Miss Jenks occurred, I had been engaged for more than a week to assist in painting her wax figures. My father and mother were "poor, but industrious," as the story books put it, and my five shillings a week formed an important addition to the general stock.

Miss Jenks had three rooms set apart for her "Gallery of Arts," her "Her Wonders in Wax," to which her customers were admitted without charge and which she contemplated moving at some future day to the great metropolis. Her figures were about the size of the ordinary Punch puppets and they were all her own manufacture There were amongst them Kings and Queens and Princes of all climes; Poets and Generals, pickpockets and murderers; and a model of every bird beast and reptile, copied from a large folio edition of "Goldsmith's Animated Nature" Some of the figures were grouped in tableaux, and others stuck up in single file. There was Daniel in the lion's den, and Moses holding up the serpent, Napoleon at St Helena, the coronation of Queen Victoria the trial of a bandit chief; the capture of a negro, and Byron bidding adieu to his native hills.

It was a strange world, this new world which opened up to me at Jenks', quite a world of romance and wonder. To be allowed to revel in Goldsmith's book, and the history of England, a book of fairy tales, Eastern legends, and Byron's poems and not only to look at the pictures, but to paint copies from them, and have real paints and brushes.

The time came, you may be sure, when I discovered that my spinsterial angel was any thing but a goddess. I was hardly twelve years old when I found it out. I was living in a fool's paradise, and that the visitors made fun of Miss Jenks and her pets artist. When my father became well off I went to school, and learnt to be ashamed of the name of Jenks, though I imbibed my love of art at that dirty source in Tick street, where the morning of my life first broke in such hues of blue, and carmine, and amber.

II.—TWILIGHT.

No, I would not part with that palette for a hundred pounds I am not rich either, heaven knows that I have painted for years and years, and old Tandy, the dealer, takes a sufficient number from me to make my income enough for an old bachelor. But a hundred pounds, no, not a thousand would buy that little palette, with the dried up patches of color upon it,—her little palette

I was a young fellow when I first knew her She was a member of that drawing class which I established in that Northern city. You don't know the city A quaint old monkish place to come away a from, a city with a cathedral and a tile which has sun lights up in a thousand and gaudy hues old ways, a city fully represented by these ecclesiastical and feudal buildings, which stand on a high hill overlooking the Wear. Mr. Beverly has put many a bit of the banks of the river water into his Drury Lane scenery. But how I wander! Let me see, I was talking about that palette of Edith's.

She was an orphan, and lived with a maiden aunt in the college yard. Such eyes! That sketch of mine which hangs by the fireplace does not come within a thousand miles of their sparkling depth And her brown hair deftly twined over her forehead I fancy I can see her now, bending over her work and struggling at it in her childish desperation.

"I shall never be able to draw any better," she said, her pretty lips pouting, and a tear trickling down her fair cheek; "but I really think I have an eye for color"

"An eye for color!" I remember saying to myself an eye for love,—an eye to make a man happy all his days."

But I was a young fellow then, susceptible and enthusiastic and I fell in love with Edith Viner almost the first moment I saw her.

"And I am determined I will do something, I feel that I could make such a picture, if I only knew how to convey my own ideas and impressions

"Make a picture! Yes, as pretty a one as ever adorned canvas," I said on the impulse of the moment

"Now you are laughing at me," she said sadly, not taking my compliment, nor noticing the flush on my face "Everybody laughs at me. Aunt calls me stupid, and the girls in the class nudge each other and titter at what they call my impossible trees and eccentric animals."

"I was not laughing, I assure you, Miss Viner," I said seriously, "I should be the last to laugh at you I who admire you so much, and—"

She had remained behind after the class had broken up, and her sweet, confiding manner to me was irresistible. I fear I forgot my position as tutor entirely. I stammered out some hurried, silly declaration of love, and felt as if my very existence depended upon the effect it would make I can remember the sensation now, gray old bachelor as I am, and I have not forgotten the awful feeling of disappointment at the ringing laugh which greeted my outburst of romance.

"Why, what a silly young man you must be, Mr Westwood. It is really too absurd. Here am I anxious that you should teach me how to paint, and you actually begin to talk about love, like Don Quixotte, or a person in a play."

And the lively, arch, supple, bright eyed girl laughed again with intense amusement. I was piqued, she had made me look foolish, she had ridiculed my tenderest hopes. I had pictured something quite different to this, and had seen myself by her desire, suing for her hand at the feet of that old griffin, her aunt, in the cathedral close.

"Now, don't be silly any more, Mr. Westwood, and I will promise never to mention what has occurred. It is too absurd you know."

"Well, perhaps it is," I said without understanding her, but with an immense sense of being absurdly foolish

"There," she said, passing from the subject with the supremest indifference, "please to look at that, and tell me if you think I shall ever paint, and will you teach me? I have asked aunt, and she is willing to fit me up a studio of my own"

From beneath her cloak she produced a bit of oil color—a pool reflecting the drooping branches of a beech tree. It was an autumn sketch, full of rough unstudied effects of light and shade that for the moment astonished me mightily There was evidence of the amateur, but the vigor, the depth of tone of the unstudied touches were almost startling.

"This is yours?" I said, coldly.

"Yes," she said, bending her head, and looking confused.

"It is very clever, you will paint," I said.

"O, thank you, thank you, Mr. Westwood," she said, looking up with great earnestness "I was afraid you would laugh at it, aunt called it a red and yellow daub"

Here is her secret, then, I thought. Her genius has made itself manifest to her: she is under its persistent influence.

"I would give the world to paint. I will succeed, and you must help me."

I did help her, during many a happy, happy hour, in that studio overlooking the river, and on the grand Tocadale moors That bit beneath Tito by the fireplace is a study she made under my eye in the bed of the Tees. Notice the rock down beneath the water, the liquid amber stream, which Sir Walter Scott sung about Something like color, that

In less than twelve months she painted far better than her tutor, who before half that time had passed, was her slave in everything I have sat and watched her and loved her like a young fellow can love, and she knew it But if ever there was the faintest attempt at pointed homage on my part, she would pooh pooh the whole thing with an indifference to my feelings which often struck me as heartless in the extreme Sometimes I went home half mad with rage and wounded pride and determined to leave the place forever but morning brought hope, and longing to see Edith longing to be at her side, to hear her speak, ay, if only to wince at her cynical laugh, and her oft repeated saying, that 'love was the greatest nonsense she had ever heard of—painting the grandest of arts'

I never could comprehend her By degrees I came to think of her in the light of a sort of intellectual Undine, before the human soul temporal the waywardness of the fairy She seemed to possess everything that makes woman lovely and loveable, but the one thing above others most essential—a woman's heart.

One morning I received a note from her aunt, in which I was informed that the lessons must cease, as Miss Viner was going to leave the Northern city.

I hurried to the house, and met on the door step a big, moustached dark fellow. I asked for Miss Viner, as usual. She came running down stairs, and at her call of "Edward! Edward, dear!" the gentleman turned round and followed her into the drawing-room

"Come in Mr Westwood, pray come in," she said. "Let me introduce you to Captain Howar, of the Bombay Artillery. Mr. Westwood—Captain Howard."

We bowed stiffly to each other, and I looked for an explanation

"I see you are puzzled Mr Westwood. To morrow Captain Howard is to be my husband, and we leave here en route for India the next day"

I shall not attempt to describe my feeling, I fear they were made very apparent at the time Anger and contempt had, surely, some share in the expression of my poor stupid face on that occasion, but I could only see cool indifference on Edith's.

I turned to go away, but Miss Viner prevented me.

"Here," she said, "is a little present before I go. I hope you will treasure it—my palette. I shall never paint again"

The next day she had left the old city with her husband. How I wished myself a boy again, painting puppets in that little back room in the Western city! I have painted many a one since, for that matter.

By the-way, I have lately learnt that when Miss Jenks died, the Chalkses purchased the "Gallery of Arts," and combined the two establishments. How little we know who will step into our shoes when we are gone! Perhaps our greatest enemy may quietly seat himself in our own chair in the favorite fireside corner. Thank Heaven! science cannot penetrate the future We look upon the tangled web as we spin it, but we know nothing of the lines and curves and broken threads to come.

III.—EVENING.

A jilted old bachelor I am. Well, if you like, that is my character. And I am silly enough to hang on to the garment of memory, and make a fool of myself over an old palette that belonged to a school girl.

I often wondered if she saw the notices of my works in the papers. Of course she did. They got all the journals at Bombay. Hard work is a comforter when you are in trouble Some fellows labor on claret; some work, as they say, on beer only, some on a dry pipe. I worked on a dry heart-breaking sorrow. I had filled my soul with one face; and, all at once, the image was not only gone forever, but I had discovered its utter worthlessness.

Edith was to me a narrow, selfish, heartless woman; a siren, who had tempted me to wreck and ruin. My soul had yearned to her, not only in love, but in admiration. She was a genius, born with a specialty for art. She was the sublime thing which seemed all at once to spring up out of a ridiculous past. All my vague romantic passions encircled her, and I loved like,—well, like an artist that is young and poor will love.

And I could not help treasuring that palette for the sake of our happy days, and in memory of one sad look which came into her eyes and voice at parting. Did she really regret her choice? Could she have been unduly influenced? Had she any choice in the matter?

Many a long year afterwards, when I had made my mark, and got beyond Tandy, the dealer, (perhaps you remember his place behind the Haymarket?) a young lady called upon me. There was a dark old Indian woman with her, who courtesied very low.

"Mr. Westwood, I believe," said the young lady, a fine well-grown woman of about twenty, and dressed in deep mourning.

"Yes," I said, offering a seat.

"My name is Howard," she said. "I have recently arrived from Bombay"

I felt my heart beat strangely, and the blood rushing into my stupid old face. I could see the likeness to Edith, it was particularly noticeable in the full gray eyes.

"My mother said I was to tell you—"

"Is she still living?" I ventured to ask, for the suspense was awful.

The girl shook her head, and the tears came into her eyes as she said, "I am an orphan."

Something brought the little pallette to my mind, and its poor, faded patches of color, and I think there were tears in my own eyes too.

"I was to give you this packet and tell you that I was christened Edith Westwood."

"God bless you!" I exclaimed, and she came and nestled in the trembling old arms which I stretched towards her.

She knew the story of my life

Edith Viner had really loved the poor painter (How all the sunshine of the Northern city came back to me in a moment!) But she had been engaged to Captain Howard before she saw me—engaged almost from childhood, and their hands had been joined at her father's bed-side when he lay dying.

She had steeled her heart to her fate, but whilst she was free my society had a fascination for her which she could not overcome. At last she strove to make me hate her, and that morning's encounter, when last I saw her, was to give the final blow to my liking She nearly broke her heart in dealing it, but the die was cast.

True to her last words, she had never painted again, Alas, she, too, had known no happiness Her husband, I gleaned afterwards, in quiet interviews with the daughter, was a gay, selfish fellow, who had met with a dishonorable death.

So our two lives were blighted, and now you understand what a big sorrow it was which I had been doing battle with by hard work And if you like to call me a jilted old bachelor, you may; but I still cling to that petit palette, and the memories that surround it.

In the hands of fate we were all as much puppets as were those absurd wax figures in the hands of Miss Jenks, whose idols fell into the possession of her deadliest foes.

Edith Westwood Howard was my ward, bless her heart! And she appeared like an angel at my fireside for a few short months. She is Mrs Lloyd Craven now, and a mother too; and her children call me great grandpa in fun, laugh at my wheel chair, and call it grandpa's perambulator.

Have not the ridiculous and the sublime been strangely mixed up in my life? Last night I dreamt I was one of the Tick street puppets, very white and very cold, with an old palette by my side with faded spots of yellow and red and brown upon it. And when I awoke I was sitting in my perambulator, as the children call it, with several people round me, and somebody said, "He's a very old man," and another said, "Ah, he'll never paint any more"

And then I was in the Northern city again, where she said she would never paint again It seemed as if memory was kind to me, and I got up and went to my room, and asked for her palette, and there I sit in the evenings, and smoke and chat with Lloyd Craven, who is at the top of the tree, they say He is engaged on a great picture now, called "Evening" There is a bit of shining river in it, an old man, a gray cathedral tower among some trees, and the sun is setting It is pleasant to talk to Craven about the twilight and the evening, and I want him to paint an unused palette by the side of the old man, and an easel with a half finished picture upon it, then Edith, his wife, peeps in and laughs at us, and we nod at her and go on smoking, and so the evening passes, and the long dark night comes on

When Gen. Grant was in Charleston, he was entertained by Gen Sickles. Next door to the residence of General Sickles resided a secesh family, the children of which—evidently under instructions from their seniors—made mouths at General Grant every time he appeared on the stoop or at the window, and used other insulting gestures against the commander-in chief. They even accompanied it by abusive language. Next day not a stone or splinter of that house would have been visible if Gen. Grant had not personally interfered to prevent the soldiers from pulling it down.

LETTERS FROM THE INTERIOR OF THE STATE

[FROM OUR TRAVELING CORRESPONDENT]

SALEM, Aug 30, 1867.

At Eugene, I took a horse and started on a cruise in the 'Forks of the Wilamette" Three miles above Eugene on the east side of the river is where I found the late Surveyor General, B J Pengra, Jno Kelly of the Roseburg Land office, and Hon A G Hovey, engaged in the manufacture of flour and lumber These mills are in excellent condition, and are doing a brisk business The company own a fine farm adjoining the village, which they also carry on There is a store and several workshops in the little town, and I think it one of the busiest places I have seen The McKenzie is the eastern branch of the river, and empties into the Willamette four miles below Eugene The two rivers run nearly parallel, about twelve miles at a distance of three miles apart, when the McKenzie turns off to the east, and the Willamette bears away to the South, and a spur of the mountain cuts off the beautiful valley, known as the Forks of the Willamette Nearly all of the land in the valley is prairie, and perhaps is the richest in the State The valley is checkered with fields of grain pasture, meadows and orchards, and surrounding it is a beautiful fringe of dark green trees, along the banks of the rivers The crop of grain in this fertile little district is good, though below the average. One farmer told me that his wheat yielded twenty four bushels per acre, and I am sure that wheat through the valley will average twenty bushels per acre. I find that the early sown grain yields better, and was less affected by the drought than that sown later. The

was a big thing in Eugene. Everybody and all their friends were there from town and country—everywhere The seats were all filled and many occupied chairs around the aisle It was as "good as a show" to witness the concourse of people of "all sorts and sizes," and to see the hundreds of fans, hats and handkerchiefs flying so swiftly to create breezes to allay the excessive heat, and it was particularly interesting to see the "fellows" adjust their arms after the clown had laughed one of his hugest laughs, and when asked what pleased him so, screamed out in an ecstasy of fun "Why, did you not see that fellow up there hugging that gal with the white bonnet on?"

PIONEER OIL MILL.

At Salem I met Mr C. Cartwright, the chief proprietor of the Pioneer Oil Mill, now being constructed at Salem. Two or three years ago Mr. Cartwright bought and distributed among the farmers a small quantity of flax seed, the products of which he also bought and distributed Of this year's crop he has already purchased 3,000 bushels and thinks there will be as much as 10,000 bushels to be had, so rapid has been the increase This adds a new and important article to the farm products of Oregon; and I am informed by those who have tried it, that if properly cultivated it yields well and is a surer crop than wheat When well cultivated it yields from eighteen to twenty bushels of seed per acre, and is worth $1 50 per bushel. The yield of straw per acre is about one ton, and I understand that the company expect to give about $10 per acre for the straw, from which they will be prepared to extract the flax and put it in shape for the manufacturer The company expect to have their mills in operation within a year. That the

at Salem is wise, few who know him will take the trouble to dispute; that he has "a character on this coast," none will deny, that he is great in some things, I am compelled to admit—such as pleasantry, for he says cute things; he is sharp, and is capable of prying deep into hidden things, as may be seen by the pointedness of his phiz, he has great power of endurance, for what other man could stand in the streets and undergo what he did? In fact, he is an extraordinary man! But that there are some things that this wonderful little man does not know, is quite probable; for which, he is not to be blamed; and that he is liable as other mortals are, sometimes to make mistakes, is reasonable to suppose, Now, therefore, I wish to say that not long since in one of my letters to the OREGONIAN, I gave an account of the event from which Spencer's Butte took its name. Now, the editor of the Record, not knowing whether my story was true or not, and being a wise, funny man of wonderful powers of endurance, concluded it must be a 'sell,' and stated in his paper, I had been sold by some other funny man. The Oregon Herald, having the fullest confidence in Salem editors, and being anxious to correct all mistakes, quotes the item. I take the occasion to say that my story was true, that in addition to what I had previously heard, I have since met with Mr. W. W. Bristow, of Eugene, who has resided in that vicinity since 1647, and his father came here years before him, and both say the story is correct, and they knew of the Indian Tom, a Calapooia chief, who said he helped to kill Spencer and that they shot him with arrows Mr. Bristow also says that the party of whom Spencer was a part, named the McKenzie river.

Rheumatism Cured!

State of Oregon, County of Multnomah—ss

I JEREMIAH BROCK, BEING DULY SWORN, SAY that I am fifty three years of age, that I reside in Yamhill County, State of Oregon. I came to Portland on business, on horseback, from my home this morning When I left home I could scarcely walk or stand on my feet, from Rheumatism, which has afflicted me for the last eight years. I was standing in Wilson's stable, on First street, in this city, when I heard Mr Rennick's offer to bet that he would take out the Rheumatism in any case in twenty minutes. Rennicks offered to bet $100 that he could do it I went to Mr Rennick's house and he applied the Liniment to my leg, and in twenty minutes my leg felt sound and limber, and as well as ever

Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies see that they are cured for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private disease his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases without mercury or any injurious drugs It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practised by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes; pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, fetid breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure Dr G will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks

MARRIED MEN,

Or those who contemplate marriage, who are suffering under any of these fearful maladies, should not forget the sacred responsibility resting upon them nor delay to obtain immediate relief.

TO THE LADIES.

The various complicated and distressing diseases incident to females, treated with eminent success Such as Suppressions, Irregularities, Whites, Falling of the Womb, Tumors, all Urinary Diseases, Nervous Debility, Painful or Difficult Menstruation, Barrenness, etc, will be speedily cured without poisonous drugs, injuries or unpalatable medicines of any kind Have no delicacy in calling, no difference what your troubles may be The afflicted are cordially invited to call and satisfy themselves.

Persons calling at Dr Gibbon's office or sending for packages of medicines, may rely upon his assurances of confidential secrecy with implicit faith, and expect no more than to be charged with, a fair, and mutually satisfactory remuneration for services rendered, considering the circumstances and difficulties of cases, rather than a too prevalent and selfish practice of extortion among quacks and pretenders.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure or make no charge.

CURED AT HOME.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Dr Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions for use, for Ten Dollars, sent in registered letter or through Wells, Fargo & Co.
